

ONE NIGHT OF MUSIC

Successful Concert in Aid of St. Andrew's Organ Fund.

The concert in aid of the organ fund of the St. Andrew's Cathedral was a musical success. The audience contained an unusually large number of residents of the outer districts. In spite of the request to come early which appeared in the papers, a goodly proportion of the audience appeared at the doors after the first number had commenced. The arrangements required the twenty minutes required to present what many people consider Brahms's master piece, "The Song of Fate."

This choral was the most important number of the evening, and the rendering is an event in Honolulu's musical history. The original scoring of the author was preserved by Conductor Barton. This required twenty-six voices in chorus, with the very unusual accompaniment of a piano, harmonium and two tympani.

The following short synopsis by Mr. Barton gives an excellent idea of the central themes:

In this composition the storm, the stress, the bitter anguish of earthly mortals is thrown into sharp and vivid contrast with the Nirvana—the perfect peace of the gods. Brahms has chosen E flat as his key. After a beautiful instrumental prelude of 28 bars in slow 4-4 time, the alto voices enter, pianissimo, singing "Ye dwell on pathways of light, through fields eternal, Spirits beyond the skies." The full chorus takes up the same phrase, still pianissimo. Passages of surpassing—almost unearthly—beauty succeed one another; while, throughout, an impersonality, a sense of aloofness pervades. The first part of the work ends in noble harmonies with the words, "And their vision celestial gazes serene on light everlasting."

Suddenly and absolutely the music changes its mood. In an instant it becomes warm, palpitating, human. Plunging into a rapid 3-4 rhythm, the voices enter in an ugly, crooked, yet oddly fascinating phrase, singing "To us 'tis not given to find repose here on earth." A sense of bitter hopelessness prevails. An immensely striking syncope is introduced on the words, "Like spray of the cataract recklessly plunging." Again the crooked theme is heard, wrought into a short fugato passage; again it recurs in its original form. Gradually the cry of anguish diminishes, and on the words, "to doubt and darkness below," with supreme pathos, it subsides utterly. A few more bars of fluttering agitation—gradually growing fainter and fainter—and the struggle is over. It is death.

All at once, almost imperceptibly, without forewarning, the original phrase of the entire work comes stealing deliciously on the ear; this time in the key of C. The surge of struggling humanity has spent itself—merciful death has intervened. The human has achieved Nirvana. This final instrumental coda brings Brahms's very beautiful and interesting work to an exquisite end.—Gerard Barton.

Brahms's life and development are as interesting as any story in musical biography. As a young man he plunged into composition entirely romantic in style and had he followed this beginning he would have been now classed with Chopin.

After a period of reflection and study, he forsook his first inclination and following Beethoven and Bach, became a classicist. His romanticism was thus forced into their mould and gave him a unique place in music. The critics charge that in the later period he lost sight of the real music in his anxiety to express purely intellectual ideas. "The Song of Fate" is a production of the later period of his life. The opening movement is the musical expression of lofty exultation, uncolored by passion. The following movement is almost repellent, so closely does the author cling to his expression of the condition of him who is not to find repose on earth. The Coda returns to the sublime emotions of the opening movement. By spreading his harmonies the composer carries to the audience a conception of the immensity of space.

A most enthusiastic applause was given the effort, and as a response the chorus sang "Cloe Sings." After Brahms, this piece was considered a decided return to earth.

Mr. Isenberg sang two English songs, "A Song of Thanksgiving," by Allitt, and "Stars," by Leon. The audience manifested a prolonged desire for another song by the same singer, but he could not be prevailed upon.

Mrs. Bruce Mackall sang a soprano aria from the oratorio "Sampson and Delilah," which was given with taste and feeling. She responded to a hearty encore with a short English ballad.

The violin and piano duet, "Opus 8," by Greig, was beautifully rendered by Mr. Ingalls and Mrs. Barton. Three movements of this sonata were played and though the performance of each movement required some time for its production the audience was not satisfied to let the performers off without an encore. The response was a very dainty movement from the same author. This was a veritable tone gem.

The return to the stage of Mrs. Mackall for three songs brought a generous greeting from the audience. The songs were in English, as follows: "The Danza," by Chadwick; "Songs That Mother Taught Me," by Dvorak, and "The Thistle," by White. Each was sung with a freedom from restraint which suggested labored effort, yet with accuracy and effect which only comes from perfect training. The response was, "The Sweetest Flower That Grows."

Mr. Isenberg sang two songs in German, "Vergeben," by Ries, and "Schuch," by Rubenstein. Both were well rendered, but the latter was decidedly the favorite. After some urging, Mr. Isenberg sang Nevin's "Rosary." There was a little show of weariness in his voice in this encore, but the piece was well done.

The three-part songs by the chorus, "My True Love Hath My Heart," by Smart; "Allan-a-Dale," by Pearsall, and "Pastorale," by Reinecke, were particularly well done. The ensemble was perfect and speaks well for the leadership of Mr. Barton. The last song was marred by some of the audience in the gallery, who were seized with a desire to leave before the end.

The entire performance was exceedingly creditable and deserved the words of praise heard from the audience as they left the hall.

The performers last night were:

Soloists—Mrs. A. B. Ingalls, violinist; Mrs. Bruce Mackall, soprano; Hon. Paul R. Isenberg, tenor.

The Chorus—Sopranos—Mrs. C. B. Cooper, Miss H. Louise Day, Miss Leontine Hartnagle, Mrs. A. P. Niblack, Mrs. L. Tenney Peck, Mrs. Ranney C. Scott, Mrs. E. D. Tenney, Mrs. R. D. Walbridge. Contraltos—Mrs. C. B. Damon, Mrs. L. C. Folsom, Miss Florence Hall, Miss Margaret Lishman, Miss Potwine, Miss Werthmueller.

Tenors—Mr. J. L. Cockburn, Mr. J. H. D'Almeida, Mr. George F. Davies, Mr. Clifford Kimball, Mr. A. F. Wall, Mr. C. F. Waterman. Basses—Mr. D. W. Anderson, Mr. Walter Beakbane, Mr. I. W. Dillingham, Mr. F. Melchers, Mr. L. Tenney Peck, Judge W. L. Stanley. Accompanists—Piano: Mrs. Gerard Barton; harmonium-tympani, Miss Byington. Conductor—Gerard Barton.

Almost as much interest was shown in the departure of the island steamers Kinau and Mauna Loa as in the sailing of the Sierra. Record breaking crowds were at the docks to see the two popular flagships depart and big crowds of passengers, many of them attracted by the activity of the volcano, left on the steamers. The Kinau got back from her special trip at 5:20 in the morning but by fast work was able to get away again at noon. At the same time the Inter-Island flagship Mauna Loa pulled out from her dock. As the two vessels steamed down the channel within a few minutes of each other the thought of a race came into the minds of the watchers and many remained on the piers until the steamers passed out of sight. There may be some records broken in the run to Lahaina.

NOTICE.

LIVERY MEN GET TOGETHER. The four livery stables have agreed to charge one uniform price instead of the way it has been running, cutting prices until there is nothing in the business for any one.

They have not raised the prices; in fact some of them have been cut. The prices will run about the same as before, but instead of each stable making prices as before, the one price printed on large cards and put up where every customer can plainly see it, each having one of these cards to make his price from. Any stable violating these rules and prices will forfeit the one hundred dollars' deposit.

The prices will be just the same as San Francisco livery and boarding rates, although we have to pay twice as much for our feed and for our stock. In some cases our rates are even lower.

The five stables have agreed on the following prices: Single horse and buggy for half day, $3.00; Sundays, $4.00. Horse and surrey for half day, $4.00; Sundays, $5.00. Team and buggy for half day, $6.00; Sundays, $8.00.

Team and three seater for half day, $8.00; Sundays, $10.00. Four-in-hand for half day, $15.00; with 15 or less passengers. Tally-ho, six horses, 15 to 20 passengers, $20.00; one dollar for each additional passenger.

Saddle horses, $2.50; all day, $3.00. Horse and buggy, one month, $60. Horse and surrey, one month, $75. All horses returned after 7 p. m., not less than $1 extra. All horses returned after 1 a. m., not less than $1 extra. Boarding saddle horses, $20.00. Ordinary buggy horse, $25.00. Doctor's rig, $27.50. Delivery horses, $25.00.
